MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOL CHILDREN
IS TO BE MADE HERE*Directors Enthusiastic Over Results Obtained in Jeannette.*LOCAL PHYSICIANS PLEDGE AID*Physical Defects of Pupils May Be Pointed Out at Little or No Cost to the School District; Dentists and Doctors on Inspection Trip.

The members of the School Board who went to Jeannette, Pa., last week, returning with them, Doctors Golden, Horner, McKee and Hoffman, to inspect the working of the system of medical inspection of school children, returned early last evening with a glowing report of the plan. Superintendent Shank, who has had a system of medical inspection in effect for five years, two years before the new school code incorporated such a provision, showed the Connellsville men just how it is done, and a number of children were examined by dentists and physicians while they were there.

Each child is examined once a year for defects. Included under these heads: Tongue, heart, enlarged glands, blood, nutrition, nose, throat, eye, ear, mouth, breathing, skin troubles, contagious diseases or dental troubles. If it is found defective a form is filled out and sent to the parents, upon whom the responsibility rests for seeing that the child receives proper attention. In case of a contagious disease, the child is immediately excluded from school.

The inspection of children in the lower grades has served to educate into them habits as to cleanliness, and general care of their bodies, especially in regard to teeth. The Connellsville system costs the school district little or nothing, as the physicians and dentists co-operate and conduct the examination of the children free of charge. The Connellsville Board has been assured of similar co-operation on the part of local physicians and dentists, even though it has been impossible as yet to interview all of them on the subject. Enough have consented to assure the success of the system when it is inaugurated early in October.

His recommendation was approved and adopted. The reports of the committees on auditing, first aid methods and first aid training were approved.

FAYETTE VETERANS HOLD REUNION IN UNIONTOWN*Three Hundred of Them Enrolled at the Annual Gathering of County Associations.

About 300 veterans from all parts of the county attended the thirteenth annual reunion of the Fayette County Veterans Association which was held today in Uniontown. The weather was ideal and the veterans began to arrive early this morning. Business houses and private residences are decorated for the occasion and the veterans were given a royal welcome. York 1920 the meeting opened at the municipal building with W. T. Kennedy presiding. The program opened with the singing of "America," led by Comrade James Swearer of Pittsburg, presided by Chaplain Cunningham. Following, Chairman Kennedy then introduced Judge E. H. Reppert who delivered the address of welcome. J. H. Porter of Indianapolis responded.

At noon the veterans led by mounted police, drum corps and the Boy Scouts of Uniontown, marched to the courthouse where they were given a dinner by the committee of the Uniontown post. After dinner they returned to the municipal building where a campfire was held.

At 7:30 o'clock this evening the veterans will meet at the High School building where short addresses will be made. The veterans will sing a drill of the manual of arms under the old Hardy tactics.

BIG SERIES ARRANGEDGlands and Athletics Will Clash on Polo Grounds October 7.*By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—At a special meeting of the National Baseball Commission it was decided to hold the first game of the world's championship series between the Philadelphia Athletics and the New York Giants at Polo Grounds, New York on October 7. The second game will be played at Shibe Park on October 8, the teams alternating between the two cities on succeeding days thereafter until the championship is decided. The official umpire will be Connelly and Dean of the American League and Ken and Rigger of the National League. The official scorers will be Francis D. Fletcher, editor of Sporting Life, and Taylor Spink, editor of Sporting News.

The price of admission in New York will be the same as last year when the Boston Red Sox fought it out with the Giants, $25 for box and $2 for reserved seats in the upper pavilion.

NEW ORDER SATISFACTORYWest Penn Saves Time by Regulating Passengers' Movement.

The order recently put into effect by the West Penn routing passengers at the Uniontown station by the front end and enter at the rear, is working out successfully, though the conductors experienced a good deal of difficulty in getting passengers to obey it during the first few days.

As it is now, when a car stops anywhere in Uniontown a steady stream of passengers pour out the front door while those desiring to enter do so at once from the rear. The result is that when all the waiting passengers are on the incoming cars are packed and the car is ready to start. A half minute or a minute saved through this system at each stopping place means much to the crews in keeping on schedule time, especially when traffic is heavy.

TESTIMONY STANDS.Court Refuses to Strike Out Testimony of Aid to Sulzer.*By United Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 25.—As soon as the high court of impeachment opened today, Attorney Brackley asked that the court direct the defendant, Jacob Schiff, that his contribution of $2,500 had been made to Sulzer to be used as he pleased. He declared that despite the intent to force the contrary, the contribution had been given for campaign purposes.

Chief Judge Cullen allowed the answer to stand though he declared that the respondent is being really tried for common bribery and said he felt sure that the principles of common decency would not stand.

CAR SHORTAGE SERIOUS.Penney Shippers Urged to Load Shipments Promptly.

No serious has the box car shortage to come that the railroads are having a hard time handling the traffic. The shortage at this time is due to the heavy grain movement in the west and the fruit traffic in New York state. Division Freight Agent F. P. Truesdale of the Pennsylvania railroad, whose headquarters are in Uniontown, stated that the Connellsville and Pittsburg divisions are suffering greatly because of the shortage of box cars.

"Shippers can greatly aid the railroads," Mr. Truesdale said "by seeing that consignments are loaded and unloaded as quickly as possible. Prompt handling of freight means more cars available."

Has Toe Amputated.

Martin McIntyre son of Mrs. John McIntyre, of Lehighville, Pa., had his toe on his right foot amputated this morning at the South Side Private Hospital as a result of an injury to his foot suffered some time ago in a street car accident.

Tramman Killed in Wreck.

Forty-year-old Walter H. Johnson and seven-year-old R. S. Blackwood were killed in Uniontown, O., last night when a Baltimore & Ohio train No. 11 was derailed. The engine, tender and baggage cars were overturned.

START WINTER GYM
WORK AT Y. M. C. A.*Their Class to Begin Regular Recreation Periods
on October 3.*OPEN HOUSE MONTHLY FEATURE*Plans are Laid to Stimulate Interest Among Older Members; Checkers
Experts to Have Their Limiting During the Season; Other Plans Made.

Business and professional men to open a winter gym, so to speak, in the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium is a part of the program mapped out by the "do things" committee at their meeting last night. A list of over 125 men who have in times past been a member of the business men's class was made and these will all be invited to be present at the opening session of the class on Friday, October 3. The business men will have Tuesday and Friday afternoons all to themselves, from three to six o'clock, with no one to bother them. They now have a separate locker room, and everything else just about as they want it. There will be no boys below the second floor on business men's days in the gymnasium.

To stimulate interest in the work of the association on the part of members it was decided to send out a monthly report to each member, telling what has been done during the month, and inviting the members to a "beans and business" supper, at which plans for the coming month will be discussed. Each member having an opportunity to be heard. These suppers will be served at six o'clock and will be followed by an evening of open house.

To make the association still more of a social center, especially for the older members, a series of tournaments will be held, including checkers, chess, billiards, pool and rifle shooting. Checkers will first be taken up and to start with a few of the noted checker players will be invited for exhibition games at the first open house. At that time all who wish to enter the contest for the championship will be notified and the schedule arranged. This contest will be held to all, regardless of membership in the association. The social and reading rooms are always open to all men.

The same plan will be followed with the other games, and at each monthly open house some one will be featured. Only the physical and social ends of the work were considered last night. Plans for educational and religious work will be taken up at the next meeting.

The football team had its first night's practice last night. The tennis court in the rear of the building has been strung with electric lights, and from now on there will be nightly practice. Charles C. Mitchell, chairman of the physical work committee, has volunteered to take Physical Director Overholt on a tour of the country by motor car to look for material and to hold a session of the Young Men's Christian Association has asked for a game at an early date, and this will probably be the opening game of the season.

New members and renewals of old memberships have begun to come in with encouraging regularity. The stage is being set for the best year in the history of the local association.

ANOTHER BALLOT TESTAllegheny County Socialists Attack
Non-Partisan Feature of Law.

The non-partisan ballot law is to undergo another test within the next 10 days, the Socialists of Allegheny county having attacked its legality. They have apparently been so effective in their attack that the law is to be put to a further test. The higher courts, as the litigation up to this time has been confined to the county courts.

With the exception of Judge Van Swearingen in Fayette, all of the judges in Allegheny county have upheld the constitutionality of the law. Judge Van Swearingen, in making the first decision on the law, held it to be illegal. The Allegheny county decision will have no further effect upon the situation except that an appeal will likely be taken and in that way get the case before the supreme court.

TWO MEN BEATEN.Owners of High House Coal Company Attacked by Pair of Foreigners.

M. W. Callaghan and W. J. Rellie, owners of the High House Coal Company, were attacked by two foreigners along the Morgantown road Tuesday evening while returning to High House from Uniontown. Callaghan was badly beaten but Rellie was more fortunate.

John and Joe Bolder of Newcomer are being held, accused of making the attack. Felonious assault is charged against them.

Hope Arrested.

A pair of box cars were arrested and locked up in the police station last night for annoying business men on South Pittsburg street. They will probably be arraigned some time today.

Hosack a Delegate.

Governor Tener has named George M. Hosack of Pittsburg, a former Connellsville resident, to represent the Allegheny National Tax Conference in Buffalo next month.

BURGESS EVANS TO HEAD NEW CONCERN
IN AUTO BUSINESS*Connellsville Garage Goes Into Hands of a Stock
Company.*WM. L. WORK TO LEAVE TOWN*Disposes of His Holdings in Apple Street Concern but V. J. Clark, His Partner, Retains an Interest; Extensive Improvements to be Made.

By a deal consummated this morning the Connellsville Garage on Apple street, the first in the town and one of the oldest concerns in Fayette county, has passed into the hands of a stock company headed by Burgess Evans. Extensive improvements are to be started at once, including the building of an additional story which will virtually double the present floor space.

William L. Work, one of the partners who established the garage, has disposed of his interest in the concern. He expects to move from Connellsville and take up another business proposition he has been working on for some months past. V. J. Clark, his associate will remain in the new company and be its mechanical expert. Mr. Clark is one of the leading automobile experts of Western Pennsylvania.

No announcement has been made as to the personnel of the new company which has taken over the business other than that Burgess J. Evans would head the organization. Mr. Evans will retire from office in December and after that will devote his entire time to the automobile business. Until a few years ago he was engaged in the livery business.

It is said that the new company will have the strongest financial backing of any similar concern in Fayette county. It is already the agent for a high grade line of cars. In addition to its interest in the business in the capacity of a dealer, the company will maintain one of the best-equipped repair shops in the state.

If a fifth game is required it will likely be staged on neutral grounds.

LOTS OF MATELIAN.Forty-Four Youngsters Out for High School Eleven.

The new team on the high school football squad are showing up very well and some surprises are expected when a number are given try-outs in the game with West Newton high school on Saturday afternoon at Fayette Field. Last night there were 44 men out for practice, the largest number that ever reported in the history of the school.

Everyone will be given a chance to demonstrate his ability and though the team as constituted this year is practically a green one it is expected to give a good account of itself.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 24.—Mystifying alibis which have puzzled the police of many cities are believed to have been the work of twin brothers, identical in appearance, and the means of perpetrating a nation-wide series of crimes.

B. & O. MAY MOVE CREWS
HERE FROM UNIONTOWN*Rumor That Railroad Will Retain Remnants of Numerous Prosecutions of Trainsmen.*Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Sept. 25.—As a result of the frequent arrests of Baltimore & Ohio railroad crews for blocking traffic at crossings here, which the company declares amounts almost to persecution upon the part of the borough authorities, it is rumored that all the railroad crews residing here will be ordered to move to Connellsville. About 50 men are involved.

The rumor follows in the wake of the most recent arrest of a freight crew on Wednesday by Policeman Ford who declares that they blocked a crossing for 15 minutes, or 12 minutes longer than the law allows. The members of the crew have been ordered to appear for a hearing before Burgess R. S. McCrum on Saturday.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Three hundred thousand women members of the W. C. T. U., working with as many more clubwomen all over the United States, will attempt to drive the skirt, the X-ray gown and the décolleté dress back within the borders of the Paris underworld. If Mrs. Almira Parker McDonald has her way.

Mrs. McDonald, who is president of the Cook County W. C. T. U., with a membership of 1,600 women, laid the plans for their "purity" campaign before they assembled at the opening of a two day convention here today. She asked the adoption of a resolution pledging every member to join this mammoth "big-sister" movement to bring about reform in women's fashions, and to enlist the support of as many other W. C. T. U. organizations and women's clubs as possible.

SOME FISH STORYWatch, Dropped in Stream Two Years Ago, Still Running When Found.

That the current of a Fayette county trout stream kept a watch wound for two years is the belief of Albert Miller, of Chalk Hill, who lost his watch two years ago. When found one day last week in the stream the watch was running and showed the correct time.

Miller, while fishing in 1911, dropped his timepiece into the stream and was unable to recover it. During those two years the watch was not moved from the place where it first lodged.

Wednesday last Mrs. Miller was gathering wild flowers along the bank of the stream when she noticed a glittering object in the shallow water. To her surprise she discovered the object was her husband's watch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 25.—Vice crusades that end in the closing of houses of ill fame only serve to aggravate conditions, declared Mayor Shank today in regretting that he had ever closed a single red-light district house, in obedience to his anti-prostitution promises.

"If each figure out," he said "how the turning loose of immoral women after a raid remedies existing conditions, it only scatters the social evil. I would not be mayor of Indianapolis again," he also declared with emphasis, "if the post were tendered me on a silver platter."

King bases his theory on the resemblance which the young man bears to pictures of Ellis as published in the papers and on certain papers found in his clothes.

CROWLEY IS MISSING.Anti-Catholic Speaker Disappoints

UNIONTOWN, Sept. 25.—The failure of Jeremiah J. MERGER OF THE TWO

ASK COLONEL'S AID*Consolidation of Organizations Under a New Leader is Urged.*WOULD BE BEST IN THE GUARD*Outside Interests at Work to Effect Amalgamation of Warring Factions
Into One Harmonious Body; Both Sides are Said to be Unfavorable to the Plan.

The consolidation of the two bands into a single organization is the wish of those who declare that this is the only way that Connellsville can retain the Tenth Regiment Band. Preliminary steps looking towards the amalgamation have met with such success that it is virtually certain to be accomplished.

If the bands are consolidated it will be under new leadership. It was realized early in the negotiations that the reorganization could not succeed if either James W. Buttermore or John E. Gaster were retained. Buttermore is now head of the Tenth Regiment Band, while Gaster directs the Connellsville Military Band. Both are well qualified in their positions and have made a success of their efforts to maintain high class musical organizations, but it would be out of the question, those interested in the merger say, for either man to be considered if harmony is to be restored. Efforts will be made to obtain the services of a well-qualified musician, probably from out of town, to take charge. Such a man is already in view.

The Connellsville Military Band split two years ago when John E. Gaster was elected leader to succeed James W. Buttermore. The band was in the realm of that time and for a while it continued with two leaders. Buttermore serving when the organization appeared as a part of the Tenth Regiment. This arrangement was not satisfactory, so Buttermore, with several members, organized a new band.

Since that time Connellsville has been represented by two fairly good musical organizations. It is contended that there is material here for the largest band in Western Pennsylvania, but not enough for two first-class bands. Both organizations have suffered to some extent as a result of the split. With the majority of his organization to work with, Gaster has made a fine organization out of the Connellsville Military Band. On the other hand, even partisans of the Gaster organization admit Leader J. W. Buttermore has been remarkably successful with the material he has had to work with.

For some time past rumors have been heard that Colonel Richard Coulter, Jr., of the Tenth Regiment, has not been satisfied with the showings of the Tenth Regiment Band. Acting upon the belief that Connellsville might lose the honor of representing the Tenth, members of the guard and others immediately took steps to effect a consolidation. It is said that only Colonel Coulter's approval of the merger is needed to assure its successful culmination.

Mr. Ladd comes highly recommended as a competent speaker and one thoroughly versed in his subject. Tax payers are urged to turn out and hear the matter discussed in a plain and to-day wired to Indianapolis for the complete description of the fugitive.

King bases his theory on the resemblance which the young man bears to pictures of Ellis as published in the papers and on certain papers found in his clothes.

Crowley left Charlotte, N. C., Monday night and was to have delivered an address at Uniontown, Pa., this evening. No word from him has been heard here.

YOUTIE MEDDIES AND CONTINUE—CASCARIS

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, Mean Liver and Bowels Cleared—Clean Up Tonight.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Affectionate Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which acids and ferments into poisons in a swift barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaris tonight will give your congested bowels a thorough cleansing and establish you out by morning. They work while you sleep—10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaris now and then to keep their stomachs, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing too.—Adv.

A Daring but Chic Millinery Creation

STUNNING MODEL IN BLACK VELVET.

The Paris modistes deserve much praise this season, and not only for the beauty of their models, but because they have finally succeeded in making a radical change in styles. Indeed, many millinery authorities say that the new hats are the best that they have seen in years. Without any idea of reflecting upon the genius of the French modistes, the millinery modes of the last year or so were rather monotonous and not as artistic as those that have just made their debut. It may be that the cause for this and here during the summer inspired the creating of dashing dress, chic angles and the wonderful posing of trimmings. The posing of trimming is a noticeable feature of the stunning hat

Chiffon Blouse Still Modish.

The chiffon blouse has become perennial and in its various phases is an admirable solution of the problem which presents itself when one tries to make a blouse match a wool costume, yet be cool enough for comfort, becoming and slightly dressy. Its admirable qualities will keep it in evidence again this season, and one finds it in all degrees of elaboration, from the simple, in which laces and embroideries play an important part, to the street and traveling blouses, in which the dark veiling chiffon rises quite to the base of the

Save the Babies.

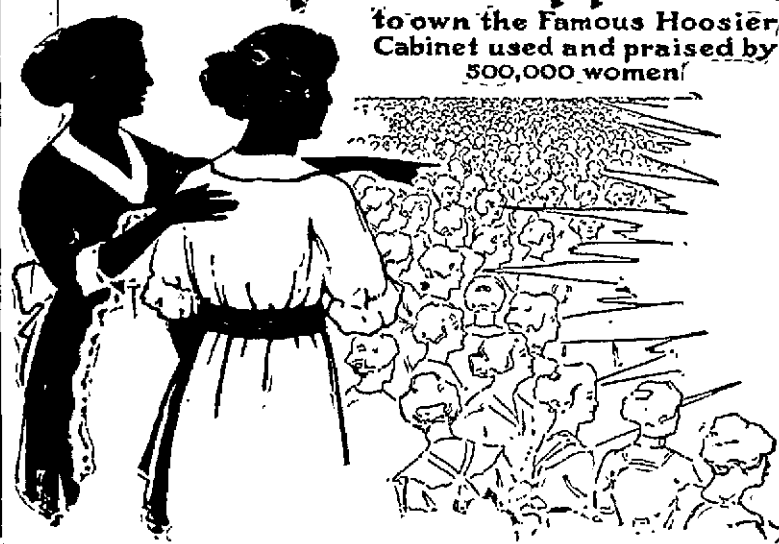

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five; and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, liniments and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of J. C. Ayer, Jr., of Lowell, Mass. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of J. C. Ayer, Jr.

AFTER PRIVATE CAR LINES

Interstate Commerce Commission May Put Ban on Them.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has directed that "all individuals, firms, companies, and corporations owning or operating cars and other vehicles and instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage of property in interstate commerce" be made defendants in the commission's investigation of private car lines and the allowances paid to them by the trunk line railways.

The private car line investigation was begun by the commission more than a year ago on complaint that the operation of such car lines was uncon-sonable and discriminatory and that the allowances to them by the trunk lines were excessive.

Information already developed is of such a character that it may warrant not only a positive order by the commission against private car lines but probably action by the Department of Justice.

COAL RECORD BROKEN.

Illinois Mines Nearly 60 Million Tons in 1912

The production of coal in Illinois in 1912, reached the great total of 59,855,228 short tons, with a value at the mines of $70,242,224. These are record-breaking figures for the state, according to E. W. Parker, the coal statistician of the United States Geological Survey.

There are 102 counties in Illinois, and coal is mined in just one-half of them. The total coal area is estimated at 25,600 square miles, a larger area than in any other state east of the Mississippi river, and exceeded only by the coal fields of Montana and North Dakota.

THE COAL TRADE.

Demand Continues Strong and Car Shortage Is Being Felt.

The coal trade continues satisfactory from the standpoint of the operator. In the Pittsburgh district a record production is being made. Prices are firm and most of the tonnage is under contract. It is practically impossible to negotiate for prompt tonnage. Dealers have already begun to buy for all trade.

West Virginia coal is scarce and prices are firmer. The short car supply is having a steady influence over the market generally. As yet the car shortage has not become serious, but the operators are having no trouble loading all they can obtain.

BOATING MEAT PRICES.

One of the chief items in the high cost of living is the high prices of meat, and it has been reserved for meat dealers, hitherto under strong suspicion of being directly responsible for present prices, to point out that present conditions are only the inevitable result of the inoperable law of supply and demand. They tell us, and there is no reason to doubt their statements, that there is now scarcely enough meat being raised in the country to supply the markets, and that conditions will grow much worse unless the small farmers can be induced to pay more attention to growing cattle and other stock.

The nation must cultivate a back-to-the-soil movement as well as a general conservation of resources. The days of the deer and the buffalo have passed, but the deer and the buffalo are still to be had for the shooting. The continent, once inhabited by wild animals, is now peopled with humanity which must be fed as well as housed.

There is a belief growing slowly but surely that meat is not necessary to human existence and that man would be better off on a strictly vegetarian diet. The best opinion is that meat makes brains but tends to grow new, white vegetable make brain and tend to longevity. Perhaps when our native ingenuity has proceeded a little further we shall be able to supplement brain with completely mechanical devices that the race will naturally become vegetarian and will no longer be slaves to butchers and beef trusts. Perhaps, too, science will revolutionize the character and quantity of our food in the manner of taking them into the system.

In the meantime, however, we will continue to eat meat, and the question of the hour is how to bring its price within the means of all. The meat dealers point out, however, that they cannot make the small farmer act on their suggestion. The state and national governments, by judicious encouragement, might do so.

WEST VIRGINIA COMPLAINTS.
The West Virginia coal operators have had a great deal of trouble with labor organizations which have sought to unionize the West Virginia miners and in doing so have involved the West Virginia mining sections in riot and bloodshed on more than one occasion.

The trouble has perhaps turned the heads of the operators. They imagine they are being discriminated against in the matter of freight rates, when in truth the railroads have years favored them at the expense of other mining districts.

The West Virginia operators are raising a million-dollar defense fund and have issued a statement charging that the coal operators of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois have combined with the United Mine Workers to keep the West Virginia mines closed down in order that they may benefit by the restricted output.

It is hardly possible that such a but it is as it is the records of the members of the combine will show it, and it is within the power of the Government to force their production.

If, however, there is no better foundation for this claim than there was for the former one, that the West Virginia operators are being discriminated against in the matter of freight rates, the West Virginia operators had better find something more reasonable and profitable to talk about.

EQUITY IN POLITICS.
In support of the plan of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company for a horizontal advance in freight rates of 5%, President Daniel Willard declares that during the past three years the B. & O. has increased its train-loading capacity from Chicago to the seaboard over 60% at a cost of $27,000,000.

This vast expenditure of money is said to have been necessary to rehabilitate the railroad and put it into active competition with its rivals in the modern railroad game.

In addition to this expenditure the railroad has increased the wages of its employees $2,000,000 annually, and the increase in taxes and other fees and costs imposed by lawful authority has been $10,000,000.

The request of the railroads for an increase in freight rates should be promptly heard by the Interstate Commerce Commission and decided as early as possible. The question is one of equity, not one of politics.

Apples will be higher than usual this fall, but the Chestnut Ridge harvest crop is reported to be excellent. All is not yet lost.

OPTIMISTS AND PESSIMISTS.

The future of American industry under Democratic tariff revision and reduction is somewhat in doubt in spite of the optimistic utterances of the Democratic press and the glowing forebodings of steel manufacturers with the experience of Charles M. Schwab. The former sees a boom beginning with the last quarter of this year and continuing coincidentally with the continuance of Democratic power, while the latter sees evidence of conditions as they existed in 1913 and dreads a repetition of the experiences of that period.

In the meantime it is a disquieting fact that steel production is growing less and less in volume and profit. Optimism in steel circles is evidently born of hope rather than of promise. Bookings grow less and less in volume. The outlook is decidedly cloudy.

The coke operators of the Connelville region will hope for the best without committing themselves to either extreme view.

The Washington and Baltimore merchants are complaining bitterly because the Baltimore & Ohio railroad has abolished the free delivery of freight in those cities. True delivery in those cities was made discontinuation of the B. & O. never delivered its freight free in Connelville. Our merchants always hauled their own freight from the depot. Furthermore, neither Baltimore nor Washington have any claims upon the gratitude of the B. & O. railway system which Connelville cannot discount.

The Democratic administration at Washington ought to build a plant for the manufacture of letter boxes as well as armor plate.

The new Chief of Police will continue as Health Officer on a nominal salary, a sort of a Paterfamilias without the "Paterfamilias." Nothing but the near approach of a change of government and a possible change of the entire health department would justify a divided duty on the part of Connelville's health officer.

The Calumet line is a pipe for the West Penn. but not one of the Old Red Sandstone variety.

Powdered coal dust is reported to be the best locomotive fuel. It is a pity that inventive genius does not devise some practical plan to utilize the acres of coke breeze annually going to waste in the Connelville coke region.

The youth has again escaped the danger of being piked. It has attained a motor boat stage.

The candidates for Superior Court are still in a delightful state of uncertainty. The inventors of the new primary ought to be prosecuted for barbarous and inhuman treatment of candidates in not having provided the latter with some specific proof against being defeated.

According to the almanac winter was here before summer was over, but we have hopes of the coming of Indian Summer, that most beautiful season of the year.

The primary election returns have been counted out after many plays. They show some surprises and contain some valuable experience; for example, they prove that the best way to beat a candidate is to surround him with dummy candidates, and ultimately speaking choke him to death.

The Cottage State Hospital is doing a slashing business.

The H. C. Frick Coke Company is of the proprietary opinion that the Connelville post house is no fit property to rent for lodging purposes, and most people will agree with the company.

Butler's second campaign is infinitely more bitter than his first.

Speaker Clark was too busy to keep his Chattanooga lecture engagements this summer, but Secretary Bryan was not; yet the Speaker had lots of substitutes and the Secretary had none.

If Senator Crow is elected State Chairman it will be a case of the office seeking the man, but it will be the right man all right.

The weatherwise agree that it will be a hard winter, and produces many proofs in support of their claim, but the crowing proof remains to be seen. It will be a Democratic winter.

LONDON.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swinh." 1

London is the capital of the British empire and the terminus of the American multi-millionaire. It is the plug hat, motor bus, chimney pot, and music hall metropolis of the world. It also has more people than any other city but does not look as large as New York nor feel as big as Los Angeles, Calif.

London is a thousand years old but looks younger in spots. It is built of brick and stone veneered with soot. Five million chimneys pots keep pouring smoke into London air which is a dark brown substance that has to be breathed with a fork when it is thickest. A London fog is a terrible thing and often forces pedestrians to take refuge in London stores, from which they cannot escape until they have bought something.

London is noted for its fine churches, St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey. These churches were built many centuries ago when London was only a small city but they have never had to be enlarged in spite of the "carnegie" efforts of General Booth and other missionaries.

London is situated on both sides of the Thames river and is full of grand old streets suffering from cholera morbus. By the time the stranger has followed a London street for a mile he has twisted off a collar but London has run into himself three times. London has 45 million people, half of whom are generally riding on motor buses. The other half are waiting to get across the street.

London is lavishly equipped with sign boards, Dulce, historic spots, customs, palaces and police. Police who are not dangerous to life and limb like the American kind. London, however, has no sky scrapers. Three stories is high enough for the

HORNER COMPANY IN NEW STORE ON OCTOBER FIRST

Concern Incorporated With E. W.
Horner as President and S. B.
Dobbs Secretary-Treasurer.

The men's outfitting business which has been conducted since 1891 by E. W. Horner has been taken over by an incorporated concern, "The Horner Company," with Mr. Horner as the president and general manager, and S. B. Dobbs as secretary and treasurer. Mr. Dobbs has been associated with E. W. Horner for the past twenty years.
On October 1 The Horner Company will occupy the west room in the new Woodworth building, on Main street. This room is 31 feet wide and 112 feet deep, giving the largest space on one floor in this county devoted exclusively to men's and boys' wear.
The entrance or tiled vestibule is between two large display windows of clamped plate glass with paneled mahogany interior finish. A leaded at glass door extends clear across the front of the room above the show-windows. The interior will be fitted with hard-wood shelving and clothing cabinets, with plate glass floor show cases.
The clothing will be kept in dust-proof cabinets, the modern way of displaying clothing. A new feature will be a men's and boys' shoe department, completely stocked with the latest grades of foot-wear for dress and substantial line of shoes for working men.
On the second story over the rear of the store is a large, well lighted tailor shop, with an entrance from the store as well as from the paved street in the rear. This shop will be equipped with every modern convenience for the comfort and welfare of the employees.
While still a young man, Mr.
Horner is one of the town's oldest merchants, having begun business here in 1891. In that year he opened a merchant tailoring establishment in the Welch building. In 1895 a partnership was formed with W.
McClure. A haberdashery department was added. The following year the firm of Horner & McClure moved to the Kutz building, now owned by J. L. Stader, on West Main street. It remained until the completion of the Title & Trust building in 1901. Later in the same year the partnership was dissolved.
Mr. Horner selling his interest and retiring from the firm. The following year he embarked in the clothing business and occupied a store room in the Marlette building from 1902 to 1910, when he removed to his present location in the Title & Trust building.

In 1910 Mr. Horner organized the Horner-Crowley Company which conducted a retail shoe store in the New corner building until the early part of this year, when J. L. McAlister purchased his interest in that firm.

THE STEEL BUSINESS SLOWS DOWN SLIGHTLY

Since the enactment of the tariff bill,
A Curtailment in Production
Is in Progress.
From The Weekly Courier.
NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel and iron market tomorrow as follows:
Iron and steel business has slack-ened off slightly this week as compared with last week, which may be due to the fact that the tariff bill is now finally to be enacted. There is hardly any other explanation assign-able for the course of the market which has been that the fore part of September showed less activity than August, and business has grown progressively duller as the month grew older. Inasmuch as practically all the business in July and August, which showed a progressive increase,
was for prompt deliveries, the present change may prove only temporary. The market has hardly grown quieter as to forward contracts for there was none such of importance.
The passage of the tariff bill should make iron and steel more active. The mills could do nothing with the fears of buyers, but actual conditions they can meet, and undoubtedly if the new duty is enacted, promptness the mills will be prompt to make them.
Steel prices have declined further,
the leading interest becoming ager-ate for the first time in the decline.
Millmen prices are now 2.95 for black and 1.90 for galvanized, applicable only on the most attractive specifications for early shipment. First quarter business is not sought and could be accepted only at very unfavorable advances.
Steel bars continue to hold firm at 1.40, while hoops at 1.60 are stronger than a few weeks ago. Plates and shims have not yielded materially, but are dull and under relatively little pressure. Wire products continue to be shaded, and some cut price contract is recently made are hardly bringing as heavy specifications as antel-pated. Business in tubular goods holds up very well, and the mills are in comfortable shape for the balance of the year. The plate in between seasons with hardly any buying, and restriction in output has commenced, with about 167,000 tons shipped, and production of about as much more within another 30 days.
There has been a slight curtailment in total steel output, and more curtailment is not improbable within two or three weeks.

AVIATORS' WORST MOMENTS AS TOLD BY MEN THEMSELVES

French Editor Obtains First Hand Confessions as to Perils Past.

Vivid Fear of Death That Visits All Bird Men Some Time.

SOME remarkable confessions, just published, have been made by the leading aviators in France in answer to the question put to them by the editor of Je Sais Tout, "Which has been the most anxious moment in your life?"

The fear of death came most vividly before the eyes of Garros when he was making his ascent of 5,000 meters, which broke the record for height. Instead of the quiet hum of the motor, he suddenly heard a fearful crackling sound. He realized that his machine had lost its equilibrium and feared the worst. "Excitation stood in beads on my forehead, and my heart began that cold, hard beating which shows better than any theory how simple instinct can herald the real moment of danger."

"Luckily I had the happy inspiration to switch off my speaking apparatus. After some unavailing moments the motor came to a standstill. Then the question arose how to make that descent of 5,000 meters, really an easier business than the ascent. Normally it is rich in good landing places. I went down as slowly as I possibly could, and absolute success crowned my efforts."

Gilbert's Terrible Danger.

A similar accident occurring at a considerable height plunged Gilbert, well known for his magnificent flights, into terrible danger. It was in the course of a flight from Paris to Vittoria without a break. He was some 6,000 feet above the Pyrenees when suddenly his motor for some mysterious reason ceased working.

"I had thirty seconds of life left to me in which to find out the reason of the stoppage and remedy it. These awful thirty seconds did not seem long; they seemed fearfully short. Happily a very strong smell of benzene arrested my attention. Like lightning the thought passed through my brain. It's the benzene!"

"It was a case not of too little, but of too much. I had two reservoirs full of it on starting, but as I had flown from Paris without stopping, one of these was empty and my motor was now being fed from the second. I had left the connecting tube between the two reservoirs open, and the pressure of the air on the second reservoir had been too strong, bringing too copious a stream of it into the motor, which accordingly stopped from overrepletion."

A Tragic Half Minute.

"I quickly closed the connecting tube and waited, wondering whether the motor would get started again. In those few seconds of passive waiting, while my aeroplane was proceeding on its long descent, I picked up my ears, my nerves were all on the rack, I strained my eyes trying to pierce through the veil of clouds and see the earth. My whole life passed in review before me. It was a tragic half minute."

"Triumph! The motor has begun to work again, though in a hesitating fashion. Then it runs off into a delightful rhythmic pulsation, a sound as exhilarating as a fanfare of trumpets. My heart beats quicker. I set my rudder for an ascent, and once more we rise."

"The hero of the flight over the Alps, Bledovnick, says that the conquest of the lofty peaks did not cause him so much anxiety as a simple common place flight that he made between Rheims and Châlons. The weather was splendid, and his machine went grandly. But as he flew over the Marne he noticed a fishing boat, in which the fishermen were standing up and violently casting."

He supposed they were only signaling their welcome, but when he had flown past them he began to get uneasy about it, and then all of a sudden his machine stood almost still.

Fell Nine Hundred Feet.

"To this day I don't know what had happened. All I can remember is that I fell vertically 900 feet—and a very long fall it seemed to be—and while I was falling my eyes were continually fixed on the fishing boat behind me. The men in it were still standing up, and this time there was no mistaking it—their gestures expressed their fears of a disaster. The plunge downward was so fearful, the catastrophe so sudden, that I almost lost my senses. Not for a minute, it is true, but for a second, the anguish of death took hold upon me. But at the last moment I managed to recover my equilibrium and continued my journey without further incident."

"The most terrible minutes ever passed through by Gullinax occurred in the course of his flight round by France, Belgium and Holland. He had been flying the whole day long, and about 9 o'clock in the evening he found himself over the Zuyder Zee."

Lost In the Air.

A thick mist prevented his seeing the earth, but he calculated that another thirty to forty miles—that is, another half hour of flying—would bring him to land. At the end of the half hour he went cautiously downward, but, to his horror, saw nothing but water.

He had lost his way! Night was coming on. His nerves and his powers of endurance were used up. "All this reduced me to a state of hopeless despair. It was real anguish, the anguish of a child in terror of the dark. At last, a little before 7 o'clock, I saw a dull, flat shore, and never have I greeted with greater joy the most beautiful scenes this world affords."

Iregi, the first to fly across Morocco, had his worst time of all over there. His motor stopped working. There was scarcely any decent landing place; the only spot was a small plot of ground hedged in by a wall on one side with a precipice on the other. Like a rider reeling in his horse, at the last moment of his glide he managed to draw his machine away from the wall, which would have smashed it to pieces.

Terror as Beginners.

Alfred Leblanc and Gaubert say that their worst times came when they were beginning to learn, though Leblanc in one of his show flights in England got down so near the spectators that he thought that every moment he was going to alight on the crowded stands.

Gaubert was in agony when he was making his first flight until, to his boundless astonishment, he realized that he was quite safe on the struts. "Wayman had his most awful shock not in flying, but in seeing his comrade, Lieutenant Ducommun, fall a few minutes before he had been flying on the very same machine."

BAD FOR PRONUNCIATION.

Silent Reading and Neglect of Conversation Are Harmful.

Perhaps the most potent of influences toward diverse pronunciation, especially difference in accent, is the fact that we seldom or never hear in conversation a vast number of words which nevertheless constitute an important and indispensable part of our vocabulary.

"By silent reading and neglect of conversation language itself," declares Richard Grant White, "is coming into disuse." The result of this practice is not only that we are always mentally registering pronunciations peculiar to ourselves, which we have no means of ascertaining to be uncommon or ridiculous, but also that the natural tendency of our language, unrestrained by the conservative force which occasional use in conversation might exert, rapidly fosters new pronunciations and produces a diversity of pronunciation even among the most careful speakers.

All these influences obviously supplement each other in resisting any trend toward uniform pronunciation and facilitate the progress of the tendencies of speech peculiar to our English tongue.—Robert J. Menner in Atlantic Monthly.

GREAT POWER RESERVOIR.

Capitalists Plan Forty Mile Lake to Feed Fox River, Wisconsin.

Plans are on foot in Wisconsin to carry out the greatest water power reservoir project in America. A group of capitalists wants to dam up a chain of lakes in northern Langlade county, making a lake forty miles long, with a capacity of 8,000,000,000 gallons, enough to maintain a steady flow of water in the Fox river for the entire year.

At present the river runs the great chain of paper mills in the west during the six winter and spring months, but in the summer the river is nearly dry except for the government channel for steamboats.

The capital back of the project is shoddy furnished by paper mill owners. John L. Boggs of St. Louis, of the North American company, to whose foresight is credited the dam at Keokuk, Ia., across the Mississippi, is interested in the plan.

The project includes the ownership of Post lake and a chain of smaller lakes, all of which will be under the control of the company and will be made practically one by damming of the lower outlet of the chain. Reduction of the cost of operations of paper mills by making the use of coal needless will be one of the many economic effects.

NEW CHEMICAL DISCOVERY.

Compound to Destroy Taste of Alkaloids Found by J. U. Lloyd.

A discovery which, it is said, will revolutionize the chemical and medical world has been perfected by John Uri Lloyd, noted chemist and author of many works, among which is "Stratton on the Alkaloids."

For many years Professor Lloyd has been working in physical and colloidal chemistry, and a little more than two years ago he discovered a compound which destroys the bitter taste of all alkaloids. His discovery has been just announced by him.

Alkaloids are constituents of plants, usually bitter and usually energetic. They are often poisonous, some being among the most poisonous bodies known. Among the alkaloids may be named strychnine, morphine, atropine, quinine, brucine, nicotine, caffeine, cocaine, berberine, etc.

The compounds of the alkaloids are very bitter and poisonous if the alkaloids be poisonous. Professor Lloyd's newly discovered alkaloid compounds that are tasteless are made by combining alkaloid or its salt with a form of hydrous aluminum silicate. These new compounds are tasteless, but yet, as shown by strychnine investigations, are as energetic as the ordinary alkaloid.

A Limit to His Power.

A curious historical anecdote is handed down from the time of James I. James, being in want of £20,000, applied to the corporation for a loan. The corporation refused. The king insisted, "But, sire, you cannot compel me," said the king. "No," exclaimed James, "but I'll ruin you and the city forever. I'll remove my courts of law, my court itself and my parliament to Winchester or to Oxford, and make a desert of Westminster, and then think what will become of you!" "May it please your majesty," replied the lord mayor, "you are at liberty to remove yourself and your courts to wherever you please; but, sire, there will always be one consolation to the merchants of London—your majesty cannot take the Thames along with you."

True Kindergarten Spirit.

Master Harold had returned after his first day at a kindergarten school, says the Manchester Guardian.

"Well, Harold," said a friend of his mother who was calling, "how do you like school? I suppose you are the youngest there?" "Oh, no," said Harold indignantly, drawing himself to his full height and throwing out his chest—"oh, no! Some of our chaps come in perambulators."

As Far as He Could Go.

"I," she said proudly, "can trace my ancestry back to armor and shields of mail."

"I started to trace my ancestry back once," he replied, "but my wife made me stop when I got to shirt sleeves and overalls."—Judge.

FOOD SUPERSTITIONS.

Dyak Warriors Won't Eat Deer For Fear of Becoming Timid.

In rural Germany one still meets with a superstition that he who eats during a thunderstorm will be struck by lightning. Abstaining from food during an eclipse is common among savages; also a belief that in eating the flesh of any animal one absorbs that animal's characteristics. Thus an Indian tribe highly prizes tigers' flesh as food for men, but forbids women to eat it lest it make them too aggressive.

In the Kougo women are forbidden to eat birds of prey on the same principle, but are encouraged to eat frogs, which the men on no account ever touch. In the Caroline Islands black-birds are a favorite dish with women, but men must not eat them, because if one did and afterward climbed a cocoa tree he would surely fall to the ground and be killed.

Among the Dyak warriors must not eat venison because it would make them as timid as the deer. Fowls and eggs are forbidden to women of a Bantu tribe because on eating either a woman would certainly fly into the brush and never again be seen. Again, the flesh of many animals is forbidden because the animals themselves—for example, swine—are disagreeable to the eye or have untidy habits.—Exchange.

Peach, Apple, One Twig.
J. O. Grose, living near Fairland, Ind., brought a twig to Shelbyville a few days ago which he cut from a peach tree on the farm where he resides bearing two peaches and an apple. The peaches are frost-bitten, and the apple appears to be a Bon Duval.

CHAPTER XV.

Forewarned.
The house had now begun to give me a great deal of trouble. On the one hand, I knew that matters had gone wrong with me; that I had, for a time, at least, lost the intangible something which I once possessed—that occult right to dominate.

That morning, as I left the training-cage—where among others, Kelly Byrne stood looking on—I suddenly remembered Sylvia Elven and her message to me, which I had never delivered.

"My son," said I, politely, "do you think you have arrived at an age sufficiently mature to warrant my delivering to you a message from a pretty girl?"

"There's no harm in attempting it, my venerable friend," he replied, laughing.

"This is the message," I said: "On Sunday the book stores are closed in Paris."

"Who gave you that message, Scarlett?" he stammered.

He was so young, so manly, so unspoiled, and so red, that on an impulse I said: "Kelly, it was Mademoiselle Elven who sent you the message."

His face expressed troubled astonishment.

"Is that her name?" he asked.

"Well—it's one of them, anyway," I replied, beginning to feel troubled in my turn. "Kelly, it's not my business, but you won't mind if I speak plainly, will you? I know Mademoiselle Elven—slightly. I am afraid of her—and I have not yet decided why. Don't talk to her."

"But—I don't know her," he said.

"Or, at least I don't know her by that name."

"Then who do you believe sent you that message, Kelly?"

His cheeks began to burn again, and he gave me an uncomfortable look.

A silence, and he sat down in my dressing room, his boyish head buried in his hands. After a glance at him I began changing my training suit for riding clothes, whistling the while softly to myself. As I buttoned a fresh collar he looked up.

"Mr. Scarlett I should like to tell you about myself," he said.

"I was a clerk in the consul's office in Paris, when Monsieur Thesandier took a fancy to me, and I entered his household to learn to assist him. Then the government began to make much of us . . . you remember? We started experiments for the army. . . . I was intensely interested, and . . . there was not much talk about secrecy then . . . I made an invention—a little electric screw which steered a balloon . . . sometimes . . ."

He laughed, a mirthful laugh, and looked at me. All the color had gone from his face.

"There was a woman—" I turned partly towards him.

"I know," I said.

"Somehow we always talked about military balloons. And that evening . . . she was so interested in my work . . . I brought some little sketches I had made."

"I understand," I said.

He looked at me miserably. "She was to return the sketches to me at Calman's—the fashionable book store . . . next day . . . I never thought that the next day was to be Sunday. . . . The book store of Paris are not open on Sunday—but this was office life."

"It began to put on my coat."

"And the sketches were asked for?"

"I suggested—and you naturally told what had become of them?"

"I refused to name her."

"So they sent you to a fortress?" I asked.

"To New Caledonia. . . . four years. . . . I was only twenty."

Scarlett. . . . and ruined. . . . I joined Byron in Antwerp and risked the tour through France."

"You never saw her again?"

"I was under arrest on Sunday. I do not know. . . . I like to believe that she went to the book store on Monday. . . . that she made an innocent mistake. . . . but I never knew, Scarlett. . . . I never knew."

"Suppose you ask her?" I said.

His face brightened on mine, then he walked away, steadily, head high. And I went out to saddle my horse for a canter across the moor to Point Paradise.

"So, by strange ways and eccentric circles, like the aerial paths of bombing newbirds, I came at last to the spot I had set out for, consciously; yet I surprised me to find I had come there."

A boy took my horse; a servant in full Breton costume admitted me; the velvet humming of Sylvia Elven's spinning-wheel filled the silence, like the whirling of a great, soft moth imprisoned in a room.

The door swung open noiselessly, the white of the wheel and the sound of the song filled the room for an instant, then was shut out as the Countess de Vassart closed the door and came forward to greet me.

"Are you troubled?" she asked, then, before at her own question, as though feeling the impulse to speak unwarranted.

A Group of Pretty Laughing Faces With the Sweetest Musical Play Ever Produced "The Girl of My Dreams."

"No, not troubled. Happiness is often edged with a shadow. I am content to be here."

Her face grew graver. "You must forget the past," she said; "you must forget all that was cruel and false and unhappy. . . . will you not?"

"Yes, madame."

"I, too," she said, "have much to forget and much to hope for; and you taught me how to forget and how to hope."

"I, madame?"

"Yes. . . . at La Trappe, at Morebrenn, and here. Look at me. Have I not changed?"

I picked up my gloves and riding crop; as I rose she stood up in the dusk, looking straight at me.

"Will you come again?" she asked.

I stammered a promise and made my way blindly to the door which a servant threw open, flung myself astride my horse, and galloped out into the waste of moorland, seeing nothing, hearing nothing save the low roar of the sea, like the growl of restless lions.

CHAPTER XVI.

A Restless Man.

When I came into camp, late that afternoon, I found Byron and Speed groping about among a mass of newspapers and letters, the first mail we circus people had received for nearly two months.

There were letters for all who were accustomed to look for letters from families, relatives, or friends at home. I never received letters—I had received none of that kind in nearly a score of years.

But there were newspapers enough and to spare—French, English, American; and I sat down by my lion's cage and attempted to form some opinion of the state of affairs in France.

When, on the 3rd of September, the humiliating news arrived that the emperor was a prisoner and his army annihilated, the government, for the first time in its existence, acted with promptness and decision in a matter of importance. Secret orders were sent by couriers to the Bank of France, to the Louvre, and to the Invalides; and, that same night, trains after train rushed out of Paris loaded with the battle flags from the Invalides, the most important pictures and antique sculptures from the Louvre, the greater part of the gold and silver from the Bank of France, and, last but by no means least, the crown and jewels of France.

Three trains were dispatched to Brest, and at the same time a telegram was directed to the admiral commanding the French iron-clad fleet in the Baltic to send an armored cruiser to Brest with all haste possible, there to await further orders, but to be fully prepared in any event to take on board certain goods designated in cipher. This we knew in a general way, though Speed understood that Loriot was to be the port of departure.

The plan, then, was simple; but, for an equally simple reason, it miscarried in the following manner: On the 4th of September, the treasure-laden trains had left Paris for Brest. On the 5th the Hirondeille steamed out towards the fleet with the news from Sedan and the orders for the detachment of a cruiser to receive the crown jewels. On the 6th the news and the orders were signalled to the flagship; but the God of battles unchained a tempest which countermanded the order and buried the ironclads into outer darkness.

So, for days and days, the treasure-laden trains must have stood helpless in the station at Brest, awaiting the cruiser that did not come.

Speed and I already knew the secret orders sent. The treasure, including the crown diamonds, were to be stored in the citadel, and an armored cruiser was to off the arsenal with banked fire, ready to receive the treasures at the first signal and steam to the French fortified port of Saigon in Cochinchina, by a course already determined.

Why on earth those orders had been changed so that the cruiser was to lie off Groix I could not imagine, unless some plot had been discovered in Loriot which had made it advisable to shift the location of the treasures for the third time.

Pondering there at the tent door, amid my heap of musty newspapers, I looked out into the late, gray afternoon and saw the maids and men of Paradise passing and repassing across the bridge.

A few moments later drums began to roll from the square. Speed, passing, called out to me that the conscripts were leaving for Loriot; so I walked down to the bridge, where a tall gentleman stood, his blue-and-white uniform distinct in the early evening light.

"Attention!" cried the officer, a slim, hectic lieutenant from Loriot.

The major handed him the rolls, and the lieutenant, facing the chattering single rank, began to call off:

"Roux of Darnest?"

"Here, monsieur."

"Don't say, 'Here, monsieur!' Say, 'Present, monsieur!'"

"Present!"

"Garonne!"

There was silence.

"Robert Garonne!" repeated the officer, sharply. "Monsieur the major has informed me that you are liable for military duty. If you are present, answer to your name or take consequences!"

The poucher, who had been lounging on the bridge, slouched slowly forward and touched his cap.

"I am organizing a franc corps," he said.

"You can explain that at Loriot," replied the lieutenant. "Fall in there!"

"Fall in!" repeated the lieutenant.

The poucher's visage became inflamed. He hesitated, looking around for an avenue of escape. Then he caught my disgusted eye.

"For the last time," said the lieutenant, coolly drawing his revolver, "I order you to fall in!"

The poucher backed into the straggling rank, glared.

"Now," said the lieutenant, "you may go to your house and get your pocket. If we have left when you return, follow and report at the arsenal in Loriot. Fall out! March!"

The poucher backed out to the rear of the rank, turned on his heel, and strode away towards the coast, clutched flaps swaying by his side.

There were not many names on the roll, and the call was quickly finished. And now the infantry drummers raised their sticks high in the air, there was a sharp click, a crash, and the square echoed.

"March!" cried the officer. The crowd pressed on into the dusk. Far up the darkening road the white collars of the women glistened; the drum-roll softened to a distant humming.

A shape slunk near me through the dusk, furtive, uncertain. "Lizard," I said, indifferently. He came up, my gun on his ragged shoulder.

"You go with your class," I asked.

"No, I go to the forest," he said, hoarsely. "You shall hear from me."

I nodded.

"Are you content?" he demanded, lingering.

The creature wanted sympathy, though he did not know it. I gave him my hand and told him he was a brave man; and he went away, noiselessly, leaving me muttering by the river wall.

After a long while—or it may only have been a few minutes—the square began to fill again with the first groups of women, children, and old men who had escorted the departing conscripts a little way on their march to Loriot.

Long tables were improvised in the square, filled with bread, sardines, puddings, hams and cakes. Cakes of elder, propped on skids, dotted the outskirts of the bowling-green.

I turned away across the bridge out into the dark road. Long before I came to the smoky, silent camp I heard the monotonous ringing of my lions, pacing their shadowy dens.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Circus.

A little after sunrise on the day set for our first performance, Speed sauntered into my dressing-room in excellent humor, saying that the country was unanimously aroused to the importance of the Anti-Prussian Republican circus and the Flying Mermaid of Ker-Ya.

I had had an unpleasant hour's work with the lions, during which Starbuck, a beast hitherto lax and docile, had attempted to creep behind me. Again I had betrayed li-gions, rousing from my lethargy to shake his hand from my shoulder.

"The truth. In all these years of intimacy, familiarity has never bred contempt in me. I have watched you as a younger brother watches, lovingly, jealous yet proud of you, alert for a failing or a weakness which I never found—or, if I thought I found a flaw in you, knowing that it was but part of a character too strong, too generous for me to criticize. Listen to me, Scarlett. I tell you that a man shipwrecked on the world's outer rocks—if he does not perish—makes the better pilot afterwards."

"But . . . I perished, Speed."

"It is not true," he said, violently; "but you will if you don't river a truer course than you have. Scarlett, answer me! Are you in love?"

"Yes," I said.

He waited, looked up at me, then dropped his hands in his pockets and turned away toward the interior of the tent where Jacqueline, having descended from the flying, stood, drawing her slim fingers across the surface of the water in the tank.

I walked fast across the moors, as though I had a destination. And I had; yet when I understood it I shivered off, only to turn again and stare fascinated in the direction of the object that frightened me.

Then, looking upward, for the first time I noticed that the black cruiser was gone.

For a while I stood listening, searching the sea, until a voice hailed me, and I turned to find Kelly Byrne almost at my elbow.

"There is a man in the village haranguing the people," Speed thinks this man is Buckhurst."

"What?" I cried.

"There's something else, too," he said, soberly, and drew a telegram from his pocket.

I seized it, and studied the fluttering sheet:

"The governor of Loriot, on complaint of the mayor of Paradise, forbids the American exhibition, and orders the individual Byron to travel immediately to Loriot with his so-called circus, where a British steamship will transport the personnel, baggage, and animals to British territory."

The mayor of Paradise will see that this order of expulsion is promptly executed.

(Signed) BRITISHUL, "Chief of Police."

"Where is that fool of a mayor? Come on, Kelly! Stay close beside me. And I set off at a swinging pace, down the hollow, out across the left bank of the little river, straight to the bridge, which we reached at almost on a run.

"Look there!" cried my companion, as we came in sight of the square. The square was packed with Breton peasants; near the fountain two elder barrels had been placed, a plank thrown across them, and on this plank stood a man holding a red flag.

The man was John Buckhurst.

When I came nearer I could see that he wore a red scarf across his breast; a little nearer and I could hear his passionate voice counting, nearer still, I could distinguish every clear-cut word:

"Men of the sea, men of that ancient Armorica, for a thousand years, has suffered serfdom. I come to you bearing no sword. You need none; you are free under this red flag I raise above you."

He lifted the banner, shaking out the red folds.

"Pence, Love, Equality! All this is yours for the asking. The commune will be proclaimed throughout France; Paris is aroused, Lyons is ready, Bordeaux watches, Marseilles waits!"

A low murmur rose from the people. Buckhurst swept the throng with colorful eyes.

"Where's the mayor?" I whispered to Byrne.

"In his house; Speed is with him."

"What are you saying, Speed?" I

"What are you saying, Speed?" I

THE SOISSON.

"THE GIRL OF MY DREAMS."

"It's simply ripping," said the girl in white and her escort emphatically affirmed her judgment—and that is the consensus of opinion of the capacity audiences everywhere that agrees the appearance of the dainty musical play, "The Girl of My Dreams."

Nesbit and Hauerbach, the authors of the book and lyrics have adequately "perfected" while Hauerbach's score is equal to any of the latter-day efforts of light musical composition. There is a rhythm to the song and the dance compositions.

A feature of "The Girl of My Dreams" is that it has no stars and no given a chance to do something, and in each case they fare well in the places of the audience.

The chorus and ensemble work of the company is of a high standard, the chorus being able to sing, while the ballet figures are intricate and novel. There is not a dull moment in the performance.

Orchestra is another attraction for those of "The Girl of My Dreams," which will be presented here at the Soisson Theatre, matinee and night, Saturday, September 27, with its original cast, the Hauerbach-Seaton pony ballet, and a big heavy chorus.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

Among the notable scenes of Kibbler & Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is to be at the Soisson Theatre, matinee and night, Monday, September 29, is the St. Claire home, showing a tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees, among which nestles the typical southern plantation residence, the home of Little Eva. Legere's cotton plantation on the Red river with the cotton in full bloom; the wild rocky pass in Southern Ohio, and the ice-choking Ohio river by moonlight. The transformation outfit, "The Colored City" is said to be the most magnificent tableau ever conceived. In offering his review to our city Kibbler & Martin not only claim that the scenic effects are superior to any ever attempted but honestly assure prospective patrons that the company is composed of the most capable talent obtainable.

ARCADE

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY.

The following criticism is taken from the Montreal New Standard on the show at the "Arcade" the last half this week.

Manager Hall is fortunate in having a candlestick which comedy at his popular playhouse the first three acts of this week, which is a comedy above the average. John Myle and May Orth are the principals in the offering and they are deserving of special mention. The comedy through the "Palace of the Cabaret," which is the name of the confection of mirth and music, is somewhat different from that found in the majority of this kind of bills and there is an originality which is pleasing after the monotony of numerous preceding shows of this character which have appeared here from time to time.

The offering is in two acts and the many music numbers are rendered in a way which takes well. A criticism of the show must be favorable. The stars and supporting cast deserve such. If you want to enjoy an hour and a half of music and mirth don't overlook the "Arcade" today and tomorrow. Following is the list of musical numbers which constituted and pleased yesterday's audiences at the "Arcade."

CONSUMERS ASKING FOR OCTOBER COKE; $2.50 PRICE FIRM

Off-Grade Spot Coke Offers at Low Prices with Few Takers.

MERCHANT MARKET SUPPORT

Gathers Strength as its Wisdom Shakes
Into Understanding of Operators.
An Abundant and Profit Command
From Market Practically Stagnant.

From The Weekly Courier.
PITTSBURG, Sept. 21.—Inquiry has begun to develop for October furnace coke, three or four negotiations being now in progress, but there is much uncertainty as to whether or not a market will be made. Thus far there are no reports of less than $2.50 being quoted for standard grade for October or later delivery. A merchant operator today concluded a sale of 1,200 tons per week to an eastern consumer, from date to the end of October, aggregating about 6,000 tons, at $2.50.

There is hardly any inquiry for prompt coke. There continue to be offerings at various prices from $2.50 down to $2.25 and possibly less. The total tonnage thus offered is not large, and is an ordinary active prompt market. It is claimed that as to the bulk, if not all, of the offerings the quality is decidedly below standard, being coke such as a consumer might purchase in a limited way, but which would not be acceptable as constituting the basis for a month's run. The prompt market seems to be quotable still at $2.50 as a general basis.

There are definite reports that the ranks of the operators who have been conspicuous in standing out for the $2.50 price are in evidence by the addition of about three prominent operators, who have been quoting $2.50 but have not been particularly conspicuous in reducing output. It is represented that as some operators have curtailed the output by about 50 per cent such increments to the ranks would spread the curtailment and would result in a heavier percentage of operation for some of the operators. There have been rumors that certain operators were approaching their bankers to secure acquiescence in a project to reduce prices on the basis that at 50 per cent operation 75 cents profit per ton is really only 37 1/2 cents, but these rumors are referred to by the operators indicated as a canard of the most absurd character.

It is argued that the operator might be the merits of the $2.50 price in the long run as offering profits to operators, the question of a reduction would not come up at this time, when the usual early winter softening in coke is near at hand, and when 1.14 contracts are about to become a matter of interest. It is predicted that $2.50 will be held for October and November, whatever might become the policy for the more distant future.

The market continues quotable as follows:
Prompt furnace $2.50
Contract furnace $2.50
Prompt foundry $2.00
Contract foundry $2.00

The pig iron market has grown still quieter this week, and is practically stagnant. In foundry iron, inquiry is limited almost entirely to very small prompt lots, though a sanitary interest is asking prices on about 2,500 tons for fourth quarter. Furnaces have been talking higher prices on both foundry and basic, but actual sales have not been made to prove a higher market level. Two fair inquiries for basic were out last week, but have since been withdrawn, leaving nothing of importance in basic to elicit quotations. The market stands quotable as follows: Bessemer, $15.75 to $16; basic, $14 to $14.25; No. 2 foundry, $11 to $11.25; forge, $13.50 to $13.75; puddle, $11.25; at Valley furnace, 50 cents higher delivered Pittsburgh.

The semi-finished steel market has been stagnant, and while consumers have professed the belief that they could break the selling prices of the mills there is not inquiry enough to develop what the mills would actually do, current quotations being $25 on billets and $26 on sheet bars, at maker's mill, Pittsburgh. Rods have weakened to $22, Pittsburgh.

The whole iron and steel market is decidedly quiet this week, more so than last week. There are fair current bookings, but on the average they run decidedly below the standard, and as the accumulation of old business is playing out in some departments restrictions in steel output is a prospect within a very few weeks unless new buying improves decidedly.

RICH POCAHONTAS

Big Field's Output is 15,000,000 Tons in Single Year.

Partisans of the Pocahontas coal field boast that it is the only place on earth where coal is so abundant that they can afford to dig the railroad tunnels in it. The Conditia tunnel, 3,200 feet long, on the main line of the Norfolk & Western railway, 15 miles from Bluefield, was driven through the Pocahontas No. 3 seam, there is feet thick. Local tradition has it that the contractor who built the tunnel sold the coal out of it for enough to defray the cost.

There can be no doubt that the Pocahontas field, an area approximately fifteen miles wide by twenty-five miles long, underlain by a seam of smokeless coal from six to eleven feet or more thick, and running in one known instance to twenty-three feet in thickness, is producing a good deal of the coal. The 1912 output was 13,407,601 tons of coal and 1,161,642 tons of coke, which, reduced to its equivalent in coal, would swell the total to 15,356,263 gross tons.

Fall Shoe Display

WRIGHT-METZLER SHOES are for men and women who have fixed ideas as to footwear: the BEST of shoemaking; the CORRECT style of the season; COMFORT: accurate FIT. WRIGHT-METZLER shoes are first, last and all time QUALITY shoes. They have marked individuality of line—these fine shoes of CHARACTER, STYLE and FIT.

Twenty-five Styles for Men

WITH EACH MODEL DIFFERING IN SOME POINT OF FASHION OR COMFORT.

A snappy comfortable style is illustrated. Notice the lower heel, the shape of the toe, and the finely curved vamp. This model is popular among all men, and wearable on all occasions. Just as neat looking are the more conservative sorts for men who "live" in shoes.

Black, tan, patent and dull leathers, in durable calf and soft vel, in FOOT FORM and English lasts. All sizes.

There's true value in every pair of shoes for men—we know what's in them!

Fully Thirty Styles for Women

ALL IN COMPLETE READINESS IN EVERY SIZE AND WIDTH. HERE YOU WILL FIND REAL SHOE VALUE.

The new fashion lines are very sensible, and so designed as to give a more slender foot appearance. Women's Wright-Metzler Shoes show these new lines, and also the solid, substantiality which makes for good wear. A pretty model is pictured—the same style coming in button or lace.

Black and tan calf, ocre leather, suede, velvet, cravenette, gunmetal and dull. Button shoes lead—although laced models are good.

Vamps are longer, toes narrower and heels lower for the majority of women's shoes.

WE WARRANT prices 25c to 75c lower on Wright-Metzler shoes—and a higher grade of material and workmanship for the prices we ask than you regularly get at any other store in town. This comes about through our handling non-advertised lines—the amount necessary to spend in a season's campaign going into the shoes themselves. This broad statement is provable by comparing our shoes with others and by their more satisfactory wear.

Going, Growing, Glowing Finely—the SILKS in this SALE and

Autumn Exhibit

The SALE is of many kinds of practical and fashionable silks, usable for utility and particular wear. There are crepe metcors, charmeuse, Cheney foulards, satin Riviera and novelty weaves in glowing colors and rich patterns. The prices are enough under regular to make it interesting to ALL women. Scissors are going merrily—but don't wait until alert women skin the cream of the collection.

The Exhibit is a presentation of silks which have been ordained leaders for autumn and winter.

We overheard a woman remark that the display brought to her mind the old fairy tale of the prince who set off to find a carpet soft and fine enough to be drawn through the eye of a needle. To her it seemed that the manufacturers had some such object in view when they determined the texture of the new silks—fluffy, mysterious weaves of silk and metal and velvet, colorful harmonies that stir a very rapture—above and beyond any that have preceded.

Some are exact duplicates of the weaves used by notable French designers; others are direct imports in greater variety than we've ever brought in. Of the latter, there is not too much of any one design or color, making for greater exclusiveness to the purchaser.

Prominent in the display are: EXQUISITE BROCHE SILKS, MOIRÉS IN NOVELTY TONES, BUBBLED SILKS—MANY SHADES, GOLD AND SILVER VESTINGS, PLAIN SILKS AND BLACK MAN-

DARIN AND EGYPTIAN SILKS, SILKS FOR COMBINATION USE.

The display is rich in the better grades. This is Connellsville's silk store and, where other stores leave off we continue our collection to the highest notch of beauty and exclusiveness. Stop where you will, at Wright-Metzler's you will find something different and pleasing.

TWENTY KINDS OF BLACK SILKS ARE IN THIS AUTUMN EXHIBIT.

Practically everything in colored silks is duplicated in BLACK, from the modest plain weave to the high-class novelty brocade.

Bonnets will be used extensively as trimmings, and they are in a variety of shapes, designs and colors—elegant, or gleaming jet, scintillating with many hues, or out and out brilliant in tone.

Girdles are a part of the trimming note. Girdle ribbons fairly riot in color. Rich, vibrant, wonderful colors they are and they are proving the dominant note in the costume they are used with.
